TYNE COT CEMETERY, ZONNEBEKE, BELGIUM

Tyne-Cot Cemetery

The Commonwealth War Graves Commission's Tyne Cot Cemetery is located in an area which was known as the Ypres Salient where Commonwealth, French, Belgian and German forces fought almost continuously throughout the First World War.

In 1917, British forces launched the Third Battle of Ypres, which raged from July to November. Forces from the UK, Australia, Canada, New Zealand and South Africa fought to push the Germans off the low ridges that dominate the area. On 4 October 1917, during the phase known as the Battle of Passchendaele, the 3rd Australian Division captured a group of German Bunkers on the ridge below the village of Passchendaele.

One of these bunkers was unusually large and was used as an advanced dressing station after its capture. From 6 October 1917 to the end of March 1918, 343 graves were made, on two sides of it, by the 50th (Northumbrian) and 33rd Divisions, and by two Canadian units. The cemetery was in German hands again from 13 April to 28 September, when it was finally recaptured, with Passchendaele, by the Belgian Army.

Historical Background

1 Anzac Corps attacked with the 5th Australian Division on the right. In the 15th Australian Brigade the battalions were to advance successively but bunched up near the first objective and were stopped by pillboxes at the "racecourse" and fire from the 33rd Division area to the south. At 7:30 a.m. the right-hand battalion dug in at the boundary with the 33rd Division and the other two advanced to the second objective by 11:00 a.m. The left brigade assembled in twelve waves on a strip of ground 60 yd (55 m) deep and avoided the German barrage fired at 4:00 a.m. which fell behind them and advanced through the fog 500 yd (460 m) almost unopposed to The Butte. At some pillboxes there was resistance but many German soldiers surrendered when they were rapidly surrounded.

The Butte was rushed and was found to be full of German dugouts. Two battalions passed through at 7:30 a.m. towards the second objective, a 1,000 yd (910 m) stretch of the Flanders I Stellung and some pillboxes, until held up by fire from a German battalion headquarters on the Polygonbeek. A reserve battalion overran the dugouts and more pillboxes nearby, advancing to just beyond the final objective, at the junction with the 4th Australian Division to the north, taking 200 prisoners and 34 machine-guns. An attempted German counter-attack by part of the 17th Division was dispersed by artillery and machine-gun fire.

The 4th Australian Division assembled well forward and avoided the German barrage by squeezing up into an area 150 yd (140 m) deep and attacked at 6:45 a.m. with two brigades. The right brigade attacked through a mist, took the first objective with only short delays to capture pillboxes but then mistakenly advanced into the standing barrage, which had paused for twice as long as usual, to assist the 3rd Division advance through muddier conditions to the north and had to be brought back until the barrage moved forward. The brigade reached the final objective from just short of the Flanders I Stellung on the right and the edge of Zonnebeke on the left and gained touch with the 5th Australian Division further south.

At 1:20 p.m. air reconnaissance reported German troops east of Broodseinde ridge and at 3:25 p.m. as the German force from the 236th Division, massed to counter-attack it was dispersed by artillery fire. The northern brigade advanced to the final objective against minor opposition, moving beyond the objective to join with the 3rd Division to the north, which had pressed on into Zonnebeke. Attempts by the Germans to counter-attack at 4:00 p.m. and 6:00 p.m. were stopped.

Opening Prayer

Led by Chaplain Major Frank Langford – Australian Army

Almighty God, we confess that we are slow to accept death as an inevitable part of life.

We confess that we struggle to let go of our family and friends into your eternal care.

You know and understand the depth of our sorrow, may your Holy Spirit come to us as the Comforter you promised.

Grant us the peace and love we need as we reach out to comfort one another.

And as we remember this Unknown Soldier, this nameless man.

May we hold his memory dear to us as a father, brother, son, uncle and friend.

He is someone who was loved and missed and today we honour him and thank you for his sacrifice.

Even though the pain of loss may have diminished, once again we are reminded that death stole him from those whom he loved.

But he is not alone in this hallowed ground, and we will always remember him, the Unknown Soldier.

We pray for him, and others who sacrificed their lives, and all men, women, and children, who suffered due to cruel days of war. Lord, in your mercy.

All: Amen

All: Our Father, who art in heaven,

Hallow be thy Name,

Thy Kingdom come.

Thy will be done in earth,

As it is in heaven.

Give us this day our daily bread.

And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil.

For thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory for ever and ever,

Amen

There is a time to be born and a time to die.

We commit this Unknown Soldier to his natural resting place.

We commit this body to the ground, earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust.

All: Amen.

Closing Prayer

Chaplain Frank Major Langford – Australian Army

Almighty God, as we depart this solemn place of remembrance, we give thanks for this man who gave his life and all those who sacrificed themselves in the service of others.

May we go as a people who know life and hope and peace?

Holding fast to that which is good, giving respect and honour to all.

May God bless the bonds of friendship, reverence, and understanding that have grown amongst nations once pitted against each other in this poignant place?

And help us to keep these bonds unbroken through the generations ahead.

And may we know the blessing of God almighty the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit,

For-now and for-ever – Amen
